

A message from Dr. Cynthia A. Gómez, Search Committee Chair

On behalf of the Guttmacher Institute's Board of Directors, I am pleased to formally announce the search for the Institute's fifth President and CEO. As a former chair of the Institute's Board, I am honored to lead an eight-person search committee tasked with finding an individual to lead this venerable and vital organization forward.

The Institute's new President and CEO will fill the position previously occupied by Dr. Sharon Camp, who left the Institute on July 15, 2013. During her decade-long tenure, Dr. Camp took an already thriving organization and brought it to new levels of innovation, visibility and effectiveness. Her profound impact on the Institute is evident today in a greatly expanded and extremely well regarded program of research, policy analysis and public education, as well as a growing staff and budget.

The Guttmacher Institute is a strong organization whose standing, both domestically and internationally, place it at the forefront of its field, and we are confident that many talented individuals will recognize the tremendous opportunity that leading the Institute represents. The new president will lead an organization that remains blessed with tremendous assets—none more important than its incredibly talented and dedicated staff.

In conducting this search, we are working with Russell Reynolds, a highly regarded executive search firm. We ask that you help us spread the word about this opportunity by bringing it to the attention of individuals in your networks. You will find the position description here. For more information, please contact Guttmacher@russellreynolds.com.

We look forward to this next chapter in the Institute's history. Thank you for your partnership and support.

Sincerely,
